

14 years on no one has forgotten

To London with March for England and friends to lay flowers at the US Embassy in Grosvenor Square on the anniversary of the terrorist attacks of 9th September 2001.

Flowers from the Prime Minister and some other organisations and individuals were already there at the memorial at the other end of the garden, opposite the embassy.

I chose a dozen white roses on behalf of the contributors and British readers of this website

Grief is the price we pay for love.

I always think that is so true.
