On At Last Looking Into Chapman's Homer

by Len Krisak (February 2015)

 $\mathbf{I}$  've traveled little, but whatever realms

I've seen have shown a little less than gold

And goodly: elsewhere often underwhelms.

I mostly tend to read what I've been told

Are great demesnes—now, Chapman's Iliad

And Odyssey. (God knows these couplets bowled

Him over-Keats-and face it: that's not bad.

Fourteeners have been known to stop men cold.)

But as for planets swimming into kens,

Well, no-not one has robbed me of my breath,

Though some small comets blazoned what are men's

Poor truths: "Then fell they to the works of death"
