

On Having a New English Review Article Plagiarized in the Nigerian Leadership

by Shai Afsai (August 2013)

It recently came to my attention that a New English Review article I wrote, "Leadership's website that same day (July 17, 2013). From there, the plagiarized article was picked up and posted to other websites, such as Ensuring strict adherence to the journalism's code of Ethics."

That the Nigeria Union of Journalists already had some familiarity with Igho Oyoyo was indicated by a January 1, 2013 Leadership article headlined "website on July 26, along with an accompanying note:

This article: "Igbo Jews in Nigeria Study and Practice of Judaism" by ShaiAfsai was erroneously published in the name of Igho Oyoyo in our July 17 edition. We regret this error and assure Mr ShaiAfsai and New English Review of our utmost respect for their intellectual property rights.

This correction also appeared in the print version of the paper on July 26th.

Shai Afsai's "Igbo Jews of Nigeria Strive to Study and Practice" was published in the July 2013 issue of NER. It was reprinted with permission in the Leadership as "Igbo-Jews Of Nigeria Study And Practise Judaism" on July 26, 2013.
