

Reports of Ecological Disaster, Cause Unknown, Passover 5759

by Steven Sher (October 2017)

Landscape in Red Light, Emile Nolde

In this season of our freedom,
we remember how the Nile

red with blood once flowed
and how the strength of Egypt ebbed until its host drowned in the Sea of Reeds.

Again the river is a floating grave:

bloated fish and hippos,

carcasses of crocs: another plague
upon a house forever cursed.

The cry, We are all dead men,
again rising through the land

Brooklyn native Steven Sher is the author of 15 books including, most recently, Uncharted Waters (New Feral Press, 2016) and The House of Washing Hands (Pecan Grove Press, 2014). He has taught at many universities/workshops for more than 35 years. He moved to Jerusalem in 2012. Find out more at stevensher.net.

If you have enjoyed this poem by Steven Sher and want to read more, please click here.

To help New English Review continue to publish original and thought provoking poetry such as this, please click here.