

Yuletide

by Romain P. A. Delpéuch (June 2023)

Small Village in the Snow, Roger Hebbelinck after Valerius de Saedeleer, 1930s

I'm all alone on Christmas Eve, and only crows and the cold air,
and maybe memories, believe that bygone years ignored despair.
Enclosed in bubbles white of lies and fallen prey to prying eyes, our senses doubted, yet we knew.

Letting them double down on madness and froth ferociously, and spew (or simply dribble) poison–sadness adorned in fake and hollow joy (although a plainly laid decoy for people willing to embrace the crude reality), we failed.
They won, inhibitors of grace.
Nothing is permanent. All's nailed.
