

At least four ISIS jihadi brides are queuing up behind Shamima Begum to return to UK by launching legal action challenging government decision to strip them of British citizenship

From the The Sun.

Dutchman Yago Riedijk, 28, married UK-born Shamima when she was only 15 years old, 10 days after she arrived in the terror group's so-called caliphate in 2015.

Ahead of the explosive case next week, her husband – jailed in a Kurdish-run prison in Syria – has dreams of having a family with his wife and insists he would happily settle in any country with her.

Speaking with documentary filmmaker Alan Duncan, Riedijk said: "If I cannot go home, any place with my wife would be my home. Start a family again."

He told Alan last month about his life with Shamima in war-torn Raqqa, dubbed the "capital" of the caliphate.

In the exclusive footage, when asked what message he'd send to his wife, he says: "Stay strong, even though it's very difficult all the things we've been through. I'd tell her to make use of your time, do whatever you can and learn whatever you can in order to build a future for yourself...for us. In terms of taking care of future children, in terms of being a future housewife.”
