

Attackers cut ponytails from Iranian 10-year-old girls who refuse to wear hijab

Iranian girls are having their hair hacked off by unknown assailants, in what police suggested could be punishment for refusing to wear the hijab.

From The Telegraph. Sharia law or not there are definite undertones of sexual fetishism here, in my opinion.

Girls as young as 10 have had their ponytails chopped off by assailants who threatened them with a “big knife”. The hijab is mandatory from the age of seven in Iran.

The attacks are being carried out by someone who stops girls while driving a car around the streets of Damavand province, according to Arman Melli Online, an Iranian news website,

He is said to move from neighbourhood to neighbourhood and reportedly has been carrying bags filled with hair braids, some of them in multiple colours. *Kinky pervy ***er*

A spokesman for Tehran’s police chief, Babak Namakshenas, said the attacks were “the result of ignoring the Islamic social codes . . . We have not received any report or complaint from the public about this issue. However, I advise families that they must make sure that their young daughters do not defy our religious values”.

Iran’s supreme leader, Ali Khamenei, this week claimed that women who refuse to wear the hijab are part of an “enemy conspiracy”. He also claimed that such women are being manipulated by the West and “are after mayhem in social order” by “intentionally violating” the dress code”.