Bare Naked Islam, they “then tried to get him into the mosque in order to ‘re-educate’ him with the usual Muslim lies and propaganda about Islam being a ‘religion of peace.’”

Unfortunately for them, Stachowiak wasn't buying what they were selling. Mohammad Daoudi, the Imam for the Islamic center in Martinez, states that the armed man is known for anti-Muslim activity.

“He has a history of anti-Muslim slogans, bashing Muslims and Muslim faith, and sometimes teasing the Muslim community by coming with his car [to the center] that already has a print against Islam,” Daoudi explained.

Daoudi also asked if “we're going back to the wild west again?” This is a ridiculous accusation, as it implies that Stachowiak has no respect for the law and would willingly shoot another man at a moment's notice. If it was the wild west, Daoudi very well could be dead after making such a remark, and the reality of such a claim probably isn't quite as funny as he thought it was.

The Imam went on to say that his religion actually does teach peace and that extremists, including the Chattanooga shooter, give the religion a bad name. Unfortunately for him, it isn't just one man – or even a few – that gives the religion a bad name.

The Muslim “holy book” is a message of hate, death, and domination. Anyone who has read it, can see it for what it is, and it’s far from being up to interpretation. Those who want us to believe Islam means something it doesn’t are either not following their own Quran, or they are willfully trying to deceive to further their ideology – something their religion actually commands them to do. So, who can we trust when it comes to Muslims?
