

Australia: Muslim Ex-Deputy-Mayor Accused of Impersonating Police Officer, Stockpiling Medication in Prison

It is mentioned that this bloke – before he got caught engaging in various breaches of Australian law, including electoral fraud – was once deputy-mayor of Auburn, which just happens to be one of Australia’s most heavily-Islamised suburbs – at least 43 percent Muslim, according to the 2016 census, coming second to Lakemba, which is now majority-Muslim (at least 51 percent, according to the 2016 census). As reported by the ABC on 21 August (apologies for the delay in bringing this item to the notice of our NER readers).

“Salim Mehajer Accused of Impersonating Police Officer, Stockpiling Medication in Prison.

‘Former Auburn deputy mayor Salim Mehajer has been accused in court of impersonating a police detective in a fake email.

“The former property developer, who is representing himself, appeared in the NSW Supreme Court, to apply for bail via video link from Cooma prison. He is serving time after being found guilty of electoral fraud offences, but is appealing that conviction.

‘Lawyer for the Crown, Jennifer Single, told the court she had received a letter from NSW police alleging they had found an image on Mehajer’s phone of what appeared to be an email purporting to be from Police Detective Sergeant Matthew Taylor.

“Ms Single said police claimed Mehajer was pretending to be the officer in the email, using an old email signature from 2016.

‘The court heard the email references a Federal Court matter between the Australian Taxation Office and the company Mehajer Bros, and begins by saying, “Hi Salim, sorry for the delay”, going on to claim that dangerous driving charges against him had been withdrawn.

‘The court heard police are investigating the allegedly fraudulent email.

‘NSW Police confirmed this to the ABC outside court.

‘Arrogant disregard for the law.

‘In arguing against his application for bail, Ms Single also said Mehajer had “no prospects for success” and had already committed a long list of offences while in custody, including “stockpiling” the prescription opioid oxycodone, Panadol and Nurofen in his jail cell. Ms Single said when the “stockpile” was discovered, Mehajer told prison officers, “It’s not heroin, it’s not cocaine, it’s all OK”.

‘Mahajer told the court that he “didn’t mean to stockpile medication”, didn’t know drugs were sold in prison, and that it was “an innocent mistake”.

Suuuuure. – CM

“The court heard Mehajer was declared a flight risk by the Australian Federal Police, and that his financial situation was “precarious” with a tax debt of over $8.6 million and bankruptcy declared earlier this year.

“His application for bail was denied, with Justice Robert

Allan Hulme stating “the prospect of success is meagre, or perhaps non-existent”.

“Mr Mehajer has an arrogant disregard for the law of this state”, Justice Hulme told the court.

And Justice Hulme is, if anything, understating the situation.

There is a very useful wikipedia article summarising his career – and containing some piquant information about his parents, into the bargain.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Salim_Mehajer

“...Mehajer’s parents, Mohamad and Amal, have come to the attention of Australian authorities in relation to unpaid taxes worth almost $10 million. Mohamad has previously been sentenced to 3.5 years prison for bribery and fraud involving the ANZ bank...”.

Falsehood and fraud, thy name is Islam...

Nor are our Mr Mehajir (Muhajir: ‘migrant’, migrating to spread Islam) and his dear papa the only Muslim immigrants, in western countries, who have consistently displayed an arrogant and flagrant disregard for the law – whether moral, civil, or criminal – of infidel polities in which said Muslims have settled, and which they are steadily degrading and disrupting by persistent misconduct, both petty and grave. And we should not be surprised by this. For Muslims are taught, by Islam, to regard all non-Islamic persons, institutions, laws and polities with contempt and with hostility; the only law that counts is the sharia of Islam.

Mr Mehajer's parents, being Muslim, part of the Allah Gang or Mohammedan Mob, should never have been permitted to enter and settle in Australia. The most prudent course of action would now be – once Mr Mehajer has served out his jail term in full – to strip him – and his parents, given their similar manifest contempt for the laws of this country – of Australian citizenship and expel them to Lebanon.
