

Biden's 'Got Israel's Back'? Many Policies Belie That Claim

by Hugh Fitzgerald

Biden may assure us he's "got Israel's back," but his policies tell a different story. On the Iranian issue, a matter of the gravest concern for Israel, the US is rushing back, if Iran will only let it save face, into the miserable nuclear deal. The accord paves the way for Iran's nuclear armament after 2030, will funnel hundreds of millions of dollars to the terrorist organizations Tehran arms, including the Houthis in Yemen, the Kata'ib Hezbollah in Iraq, and Hezbollah in Lebanon, and will allow the ayatollahs to continue to develop a ballistic missile system that threatens regional peace. Having apparently learned nothing from the past, in the Palestinian arena, Biden has renewed economic aid to the Palestinian Authority and UNRWA, the UN agency for Palestinian refugees, without monitoring where the money goes or implementing reforms that would see incitement removed from Palestinian textbooks once and for all. And he is blatantly violating the Taylor Force Act, by lavishing funds on the PA even though it continues with its “Pay-For-Slay” program – financially rewarding terrorists and their families – that the Taylor Force Act was intended to end. “Biden’s pick for undersecretary of defense should worry Israel,” by Ariel Kahana, Jihad Watch.
