Islamic State militants have kidnapped at least 90 people after sweeping through Christian villages in Syria, it has been revealed. The abductions are said to have taken place after ISIS seized two Assyrian communities from Kurdish forces in the northeast province of Hassakeh.

Dawn raids on Monday are said to have spread 'panic' in the villages, inhabited by the ancient Christian minority along the banks of the Khabur River near the town of Tel Hmar. Most of the captives are said to have come from the village of Tal Shamiram, located 50 miles southwest of the Hassakeh provincial capital of Qamishli, with others taken from Tal Hermuz. The sources confirmed that they heard via wireless devices IS members saying that they detained "56 crusaders". Meanwhile, information reported that dozens of Assyrian people were kidnapped from the village of Tal Hermez.

The kidnappings were revealed by the British-based S
