Canada must return to being a grown-up nation, now and post-COVID-19

We must jettison this government's insane energy policy and ensure national self-sufficiency

by Conrad Black

Canada needs to become more secure by becoming more self-sufficient. In a new series, the Post examines how a country made wealthy by globalization and trade can also protect itself against pandemics and other unknown future shocks to ensure some of our immense resources and economic power are reserved for our own security.

On Tuesday the National Post published an National Post.