

Could it be?

by Bill Corden

With the recent Supreme Court decisions on Affirmative Action, on Student Loan forgiveness and of the right of individuals to refuse service to special interest groups, could it be that we are finally seeing a return to personal responsibility? Could this the thin wedge beginning the end of wokeness?

There are times when this constitution does work, and this is one of them.

Let's see what sort of hysteria is generated by the ones who think they are entitled to everything with no need to show merit and no need for personal responsibility.

It's going to be a lot of fun.
