

Does Obama's Iran Nuclear Deal open the Pandora's Box of Nuclear Proliferation?

Saudi Foreign Minister Adel al-Jubeir at State Department, July 16, 2015

Source: Molly Riley/AP

Saudi Foreign Minister Adel al-Jubeir, former Ambassador to the US, was a target of a failed bombing plot by the Iran's Quds force at a Washington restaurant. He was at the State Department yesterday in preparation for a meeting with President Obama today regarding the Kingdom's concerns about the announced nuclear pact with Iran. The White House committed a faux pas on announcement of the Iran nuclear deal when it first suggested that the Quds force commander, General Qassem Suleymani, was not on a list of 700 Iranians whose travel bans and asset restrictions were lifted. General Suleymani had been deemed responsible for hundreds of US Service personnel casualties during the Iraq War and now is involved with advising Iraqi Shiite militias fighting ISIS. The Iran FARS news agency and ABC News both confirmed that the legendary head of the Quds Force was indeed on the list. We trust that President Obama will apologize when he meets with Foreign Minister al-Jubeir today. A Wall Street Journal report set the stage for today's meeting:

Saudi Arabia is the largest of the Arab states that have been