

Don't sanitise deadly virus of Islamism, warns Javid

Being a Muslim (albeit non-practising, and with a Christian wife) Former Home Secretary Sajid Javid is still trying to reconcile his decent relatives who did practice their faith in peace against the monstrous jihadists who follow the teaching of Mohamed and the words of the Koran literally. I can sympathise with all men and women of goodwill.

However being a Muslim, and having seen the sea of ordinary Muslims within which the jihadists swim he is in a good position to warn of the violence and oppression that ideology threatens.

Woke activists who cry "islamophobia" at all attempts to tackle extremism are threatening Britain's efforts to root out and protect the public from Islamist terrorism, Sajid Javid says today.
