Watch the exclusive documentary on GB News on Saturday at 8pm: Grooming Gangs: Britain's Shame.

It's been 7 years since the New English Review first published Easy Meat by Peter McLoughlin. He dealt with those cases, up to 2016 that had resulted in convictions and been reported in reputable newspapers, so that everything was in the public domain and evidence has been heard in a court of law. There have been plenty more trials and convictions since, many of which I have been able to link here. I'm sure I have also missed many, and I know of several which were never reported due to court reporting restrictions.

I think, from a quick glimpse of their map of incidents that this documentary will tell me things I didn't already know. It will certainly tell others things that they were unaware of and which should horrify them.

8pm Saturday 11th February.

I'll watch and report back.
