

Exposed: Star Tory candidate plotted with race thugs to stage fake EDL demo in cynical bid to win votes

This is interesting for two reasons; the initial story, and the way newspapers other than the Mail on Sunday (to which the story was revealed) report it.

So we start with the Express and Star says

The Conservative candidate trying to become an MP for a battleground Black Country seat has tonight been suspended by his party, accused of trying to work with the far-right English Defence League.

Nothing about the EDL exposing his corruption. The The Telegraph says:-

Tory candidate suspended over race hate vote plot

Afzal Amin, the election candidate for Dudley North, has been suspended after allegedly plotting with far-right extremists to win votes by stirring up racial hatred.

Again, nothing about the EDL exposing the corruption. By merely repeating the initial offer and Tommy drawing him out on price to confirm that he was offering payment, which is illegal, the Telegraph is making it look like the EDL are in on the corruption, not exposing it. And in typical recent Telegraph policy no comments are allowed to that article so that the record can be put straight.
