

Facebook Attacks Again And Bans Me

by Brian of London

Facebook is not a place for telling the truth. Facebook is too easily gamed by haters of truth, freedom and anyone who is honest about Islam. I've just received a three-day posting ban for this:

I'm sorry the French have to go through this again. There  is nothing you did to deserve death at the hands of Islamic Jihad again. The entire culpability lies with a political ideology that orders its followers to "fight all men until they say there is no god but Allah and Mohammed is his prophet". Having encouraged Israel to give in to and make concessions to Islamic terror for half a century, however, the French state is part of a world wide problem that has prevented the defeat of this global monster.

#RelentlessJihad #NiceJihad #NiceAttack

Don't expect me to answer comments or direct messages: I can't.

Jihad is not just fought with knives, guns and bombs: it's fought in the mind. Banning any critical mention of Islam or Mohammed is an act of "noticing this tweet from NGO Monitor's Gerald Steinberg about France:

France to have administrative detention, check points, profiling, etc. – all anti-terror measures EU condemned Israel for. 21st C reality

– (((G M Steinberg))) (@GeraldNGOM) July 15, 2016

In recent days Israellycool contributor Ryan Bellerose has also been banned and Jonathan Spyer, a renowned academic and journalist of the highest integrity, had his entire account summarily terminated. Many of my Facebook friends have also been gagged and it seems to be happening with increasing frequency.

Robert Spencer and Pamela Geller are frequently hit. A hugely worrying problem is an ongoing attack on Arabic speaking atheists. My personal belief is that if there is any hope to dealing with the problems inherent in Islamic supremacism, it lies with showing Muslims just what their faith contains and leading them away. Presenting information in Arabic is very important. There's a Stop deleting Arab atheist and secularist groups and pages". Douglas Murray wrote about Facebook's