

Free Asia Bibi ~ Vigil outside the Pakistani High Commission London

To Knightsbridge to attend the vigil outside the Pakistani High Commission organised jointly by Citizen Go and the British Pakistani Christian Association. I arrived as Wilson Chowdhry the Chairman of the BPCA was giving an interview to BBC Asian Network

This is Mr Singer. He spoke of his time working in Saudi Arabia where he came across an underground Pentecostal Church. One of their number fell foul of the authorities and was sentenced to death for being a Christian. The US President at the time was Ronald Reagan, and the US government of the time 'still had a spine' as he put it. Pressure was put on the Saudi government and the Christian man was spared death. The Saudi government learnt their lesson; now if a Christian offends a criminal charge is concocted to justify the death sentence. By comparison the regime makes that of Iran look almost liberal.

Another good poster

Wilson Chowdhry introduced the band (or the singer) Ooberfuse to sing the campaign song Free Asia Bibi, which I remember hearing Daily Mail reports that 19 Catholic MPs and Peers have written to Foreign Secretary Jeremy Hunt urging him to allow her to come here. I can't work out whether the Foreign have actually refused a specific request, or have just ignored the family when they could have made an offer. I know I have said that I believe a Catholic country that retains a strong Christian tradition like Spain would probably be safer than the UK where we know that apostates from Islam are not safe from their own community's anger, and Amahdayia Muslims are also attacked. But the government's