

General Election

Well, I have been and voted, done my duty as I have in every election (general and local) since 1972.

I can do no more than that. Just hope that the polls and what I hear talking to people translate into enough seats for Reform that the new Labour government (I don't think anyone doubts that they will be elected) has something energetic to oppose them, although they will not get enough seats to be His Majesty's official opposition.
