

Islamic State group terror plotter 'tried to radicalise 11-year-old pupils'

A little more tonight about the Telegraph the Independent and the Lantern of Knowledge school was not there when I lived in Leyton; of course that was then, this is now. The listed GCSE curriculum looks very narrow, but the pictures of the boys enjoying activities looks interesting and fun. They are visiting court and wearing legal wigs, listening to an English lady in 18th century costume, looking serious at the Jewish museum. Is this just window dressing? Did Haque have much success indoctrinating them? I hope we don't find out the hard way.