

Jean-Marie Le Pen, The Man Who Did The Most To Make Mass Migration Into France Possible, Tel Qu'En Lui-Même

Jean-Marie Le Pen is an out-and-out fascist. For years he was the face and emblem of the Front National. And because this awful man, who famously declared that the genocide of the Jews was merely a “detail of the war,” was thought to represent the anti-Islam forces, it was not respectable to criticise Islam, or oppose the mass migration of Muslims into France. To do so would be to support the unacceptable likes of Jean-Marie Le Pen. When others, such as Jacques Ellul, warned about Islam’s encroachments, few listened. For them, it was Jean-Marie Le Pen who mattered, and since he was so obviously someone whom one could not support, those who reconized the danger of Islam to the Western world had nowhere to go.

It is good that Jean-Marie Le Pen has now openly declared that he believes the Charliie-Hebdo massacres were a “plot” carried out by Western intelligence services, presumably the Deuxieme Bureau, the CIA, the Mossad. Now Muslims know who their best friend is – it’s Jean-Marie Le Pen. But he was always their best friend, inadvertently; he was always the single most useful opponent of Islam, the single man whose mere existence did the most to make mass Muslim migration into France, over the past several decades, continue without any effective or articulate opposition. His daughter is, unlike her father, neither vicious nor demented (and Jean-Marie Le Pen has always been demented, it’s not a function of advancing age), and her own daughter even more distant.
