

Mum hid phone in bra for jail calls to Islamist extremist husband

From the ex-girlfriend of Liverpool footballer Sheyi Ojo – sent around £50 each to a terrorist group in Syria. When Webster was jailed for 17 months at Liverpool Crown Court in December 2019, she claimed she was now “on a path to reform”.

But today the court heard Webster had secretly ‘married’ Ricardo Languaine aka Ricardo MacFarlane – an extremist thug linked to a roll call of British extremists, including Fusilier Lee Rigby’s murderer Michael Adebolajo, radical preacher Anjem Choudary, fellow ‘Muslim Patrol’ yobs Jordan Horner and Royal Barnes, and bomb-making manual hoarder Afsor Ali.

Rebecca Smith, prosecuting, said prison officers at HMP Styal searched Webster and another woman’s cell on July 29, 2020.

Both inmates denied having anything that they shouldn’t (then) Webster confessed and “took a thin mobile phone from within her bra area and handed it to the officer”.

When interviewed on October 8, the Muslim convert gave a prepared statement, in which she admitted having the phone.

Ms Smith said Webster claimed she had the phone to ring family and friends because “she needed their love, support and encouragement to keep on going”.

Analysis of the phone showed one number was saved with just a full stop as the name, which Webster contacted 301 times, including both incoming and outgoing calls and texts. Ms Smith said this number was attributed to Languaine and information provided by police indicated the risk he was said to pose to national security.

Ms Smith said: "Of note is offending which gives an indication of an extremist mindset. Importantly, in 2013 he was convicted of an offence of affray relating to an incident when he acted in the company of Jordan Horner, also of concern to national security. They attacked a group of men drinking in the street, shouting 'kill the non-believers' and describing themselves as
