

Muslim Planning An Attack On Churches In Paris Arrested

Here.

Less complete BBC report, but in English, here.

He is not identified directly as a Muslim, but there are references to his wanting to join others in Syria.

And he is called the presumed killer of Aurelie Chatelain, whose body was found the other day.

Addendum: I've just seen the New York Times version of this story here. The headline is similar to mine, except that instead of "Muslim Planning..." – my version – the Times has "Student Planning..."

Which do you think is more important? That the man arrested is a "student" or that he is a "Muslim"?
