

Streatham shooting: Man shot dead by armed police after two stabbed in south London terror attack

From the London Evening Standard; part and parcel of life in a big city.

A man has been shot dead by armed police after two people were stabbed during a terror attack in south London.

Update from the Telegraph 6:40PM Suspect known to police: It is understood the man shot dead by police was under active counter terrorism surveillance

The attacker was under active surveillance and the attack was Islamist-inspired, said Police said: "A man has been shot by armed officers in Streatham. At this stage it is believed a number of people have been stabbed. The circumstances are being assessed; the incident has been declared as terrorist-related."

Kiranjeet Singh, the owner of Low Price Store on Streatham High Road, told The Times his brother Jagmon saw the terrorist steal a £3.99 kitchen knife from his shop before removing the packaging and stabbing a man and a woman.