

Student Visas from Muslim Countries on the Rise, 127K Last Year

Daniel Horowitz writes in Mohammad Youssef Abdulazeer on everyone's mind, it's important to note that we've admitted 7,288 foreign students from Kuwait for that same academic year.

No wonder according to the data compiled by IIE. Seventy-nine percent of Iranian students and 42% of Saudi students were enrolled in STEM programs. So just remember when they discuss bringing in more STEM students and workers, there is a high likelihood we would be importing more security risks.

With this entire region embroiled in Islamic upheaval and the shocking success of the global cyber jihad in radicalizing Muslim youth, why in the world would we self-immolate and bring in so many potential security threats?
