

The reality is, We the People live in a fantasy world

by Amil Imani

The reality is, We the People live in a fantasy world and are under the assumption that everything will be all right. But it won't be. Who is right? We, individual Americans, often are outmanned and outgunned against the powerful globalists who are in charge. Lone Rangers win only in make-believe movies. In real life, governments, institutions, and organizations are the ones that prevail. They have the funds to buy the services of the media and employ lawyers, politicians, and mercenaries of all stripes.

Let us keep in mind that there are not many differences among the D.C. Beltway elitist class politicians of either party. The elitists have crafted their own version of the universe and want you to see our world through their lenses, political deception, and tactics that they have prescribed for you to see. Political elitists despise patriotic Americans as they did the Tea Party activists. They have carefully manufactured smoke and mirrors for their subjects where citizens think and act as though they have political choices, thus perpetuating the myth of democratic participation. Commentator Walter Lippmann, on numerous occasions, spoke of this type of control over the masses.

You may ask yourself, how do we know that? Well, it is obvious. Just ask yourself, why are the Muslim Brotherhood and its affiliates like the Council on Islamic American Relations (CAIR) have not been placed on the list of terrorist organizations? Most of us know that Islamic law is practiced in some parts of the U.S., and we know that Sharia law is incompatible with our laws and the U.S. Constitution. Again, nothing has been done to stop it in its tracks! Islam, like Communism, Nazism, and other isms, is ideological to its core. It still retains its poisonous ideological connection with Nazism and the Arabic version of Hitler's Mein Kampf and its fictitious propaganda.
