

Things I Am Grateful for This Morning

I am grateful for the policeman who killed the attackers in Garland Texas. He faced two men in body armor shooting AK-47's and shot them both with a pistol. He was the right man in the right place at the right time. I have no doubt God placed him there.

I am grateful that Pamela Geller is the face of this controversy. She is very unlikely to cave to the pressure which will likely be very great to silence her. I've been listening to people blaming her for this attack all morning and suggesting we should abide by Islamic blasphemy codes in order not to offend our Muslim neighbors (and provoke terrorist attacks).

Muslims are misguided. Islam is a lie. Islam must be confronted and defeated. If we care about our Muslim neighbors as human beings, we should desire to free them from the slavery that is Islam. Islamic blasphemy laws are designed to prevent that freedom. That's why those codes must be violated in America – over and over again.

We are still free people in a free land. For that I am grateful.
