

Tower of London – Four years apart

Four years ago at the Tower of London, from August until Remembrance Sunday in November 2014 ceramic poppies were planted in the moat by volunteers until there were enough (888,246) to represent every British man killed during the Great War.

This week to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the end of that war the moat is filled with thousands of flames which are being lit every evening by the Yeoman Warders and volunteers. My husband and I attended this evening. It was very moving, watching the rows of little lights gradually processing across the moat while poetry and evocative music played. I thought the music might be by Karl Jenkins as it reminded me of The Armed Man – a Mass for Peace, but I now