by Hugh Fitzgerald

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and IDF Chief of Staff Aviv Kochavi

While Robert Malley sends, via intermediaries, his billets-doux to Iran's negotiator Mohammed Javad Zarif in Vienna, Israel is sending a high-level delegation of security personnel, headed by Yossi Cohen, the director of Mossad, to Washington, hoping to make the case for American caution, rather than insensate haste, in returning to the JCPOA and lifting sanctions on Iran. A report on this difficult mission is here: "Israeli Security Officials Head to Washington to Share Iran Threat Intel as White House Says It Can't Be Swayed on Nuclear Deal," by Sharon Wrobel, Jihad Watch.
