

UK Prison Authorities Claim They're 'Victims of Our Own Success' in Arresting and Imprisoning Jihadis

by Hugh Fitzgerald

The problem, according to British prison authorities, is that “we have been too successful.” By that he meant that the police have been able to locate, arrest, and send to prison almost all of the Jihadis who have been involved in terrorism in the U.K. This has led to a notable increase in the population of Jihadis inside prisons, where they engage in highly successful efforts to both convert non-Muslims to Islam and to radicalize both those new converts, and those who are already Muslims of the inoffensive kind. The problem is discussed here: “UK Prisons Are an Urgent Warning About the Threat of Islamic Radicalization,” by Patrick Dunleavy, Jihad Watch.
